

THE JAVITS BROADCAST STUDIO

The Javits Center has created a state-of-the-art broadcast studio that can host virtual events and live streaming announcements for customers around the world. Located inside the Javits Center on Manhattan's West Side, the 30,000 square-foot unique space provides an affordable, turn-key experience for event organizers and planners looking for unique opportunities in today's challenging environment. In its operation, the Javits Center will ensure all New York State-mandated safety protocols related to COVID-19 are followed, including social distancing at all times and separate entry and exit points for all guests.

Equipped with advanced technology and equipment—including a giant video wall, two studio cameras, wireless connectivity and wireless mics—the dynamic broadcast studio serves as the perfect setting for executives, corporations and associations looking to create virtual experiences for their employees and clients. An experienced production team will be on site to coordinate and deliver all technology services related to the studio.

In addition to its live web streaming capabilities, the studio can host up to 300 attendees in a comfortable, socially-distanced setting when such meeting capacity is allowed with certain restrictions. As a result, the studio can serve as a hybrid event space where event organizers can create new experiences for those in person and others connecting remotely—in a seamless and simultaneous fashion.
